Initial Meeting Notes

Creative Director: Aliyah Blackburn
Designer: Lily Wu

Project Title: Agatha Christie Website

Content

- Most, if not all, content can be found on the Wikipedia page about Agatha Christie, in the individual headers I've already labeled in the content outline.
- Some of the sections have a lot of information, and some that diverges away from Agatha Christie—a lot of information can be count out so that it focuses on Agatha Christie.
- Her bestsellers should be scattered throughout the page, but this website includes a good and concise list: <https://bookriot.com/2018/01/09/best-agatha-christie-books/> (for "Most Famous Works").
- Please, please feel free to ask any questions for clarity in content, as I understand I'm being specific but in a vague way.

Style

- The book covers should serve as fairly good examples of aesthetic, along with the idea that the site stays true to her appearance as an author.
- I don't have a clear-cut idea of specific elements, so there is room for exploration within the design brand.
- I am also open to looking through several proposed options for design elements, such as font choice or color, before making an actual mockup, but this is in no way necessary.

Due Date

- A general mockup before the official mockup due next Wednesday would be useful for developing a good direction; even one page works fine.

Contact

For questions regarding any of the above categories or for submitting mockups, I check my email very often. My email is ablackburn@wustl.edu.
